TO SPEND SUMMER MONTHS IN JAIL

Man who Has Adams County Jail for Shelter in Winter Denied Privilege of Leaving when Sheep Season of Spring Arrive.

Judge Swope on Tuesday afternoon imposed sentence on two offenders who belong in the township's poor house rather than in the county jail, but there is nothing else for the county to do.

John Nugget, who has figured frequently in local court, was given the six month sentence. The Court told the prisoner, who pleaded guilty, that he believed his method of obtaining was to commit some offense in the fall which would insure him a warm place over the cold winter months. Now that the pleasant summer is about Nugget is thought to be willing to leave his place of shelter but the Court would not have it that way and sent him back for six more months.

"John Doe," arrested several months ago by T. P. Turner, for profanity and generally objectionable conduct on the streets of town was found guilty on a charge of being a common nuisance, after two witnesses were heard. "Doe" also appeared before Judge Swope returned him to Sheriff Frank's hospice for six months and advised the man when his sentence was compiled with to tell all his friends "on the road" to fight shy of Adams County as it would not be such a pleasant place to pursue their vocation.

Charles Warren pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny and was put on parole for a year. The defendant brought following the disappearance of two unmated rolls from the Gettysburg furniture factory. The rolls were valued at forty or fifty dollars and said that most probably if Warren who was an employee in the factory asked for the material it would have been cheerfully given to him.

The Court ordered that in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Jason M. Watson in lieu of a sentence of imprisonment the defendant pay the costs.

Frank Warthen was acquitted on charge of Highland township to fill the unexpired term of Howard Brown.

On Wednesday last year in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Frank Shelley charged with receiving stolen property in a verdict of not guilty but ordered the defendant to pay the costs.

The cases against George Tonsil and Thomas Tonsil, brought by Ida Marcus and both charging assault and battery were not pressed, as was also the case of Beulah Naylor charged with receiving stolen goods. It will be remembered that the defendant in this last case was brought from Cumberland, Maryland, charged with receiving some of the goods stolen from the home of Merritte Naylor, between here and Fairfield some months ago.

At a session of Court held Saturday the following trustees was transacted.

WANT CROSSING MADE SAFE

New Oxford citizens are alarmed over what they term the dangerous character of their railroad crossing near the station. Several accidents have occurred there, some fortunately, resulting fatally and a few days ago another was narrowly averted. A horse took fright at an automobile, distracting the driver's attention. The chauffeur was unable to get control, direction and its driver failed to bear the approaching train. By his shrinking being taken up with the difficulties of the man in the engine, his attention would most probably have met on the track in advance of the train, and approaching from the east had not Joseph L. Weaver, who was nearby, rushed to the middle of the road preventing the catastrophe. It was a narrow as well as a fortunate escape. Now Oxford suggests a watchman, gong or other means is adequately provided.

Wilson Blocher has purchased the farm of the late Mrs. Joseph Hershey on the J. A. Slaybaugh farm. Mr. Blocher take possession.

The farm contains 97 acres and the price paid was $4,200.

HIGHWAY BILL

The Sproul resin highway bill was passed finally by the Senate Tuesday with no affirmative recommendation. The measure has been under consideration nearly few changes in the measure, but the opinion prevails that the legislation made that road work now under contract should be continued under the new law and that the most important change is provision that toll roads may be taken over by the counties and not be taken over until regularly opened for public use. This can be taken over by the highway commissioner by June 1, 1911.

COLLEGE CLUBS SANG TO 4,000

Combined Musical Clubs Return Home after Trip of almost a Thousand Miles and Concerts before Large Audiences in Big Cities.

After traveling almost a thousand miles and singing and playing before audiences aggregating four thousand people the Gettysburg College combined musical clubs returned home Thursday at ten o'clock after having given concerts in Altoona and last night on Wednesday evening.

The greater portion of the trip was made in the chilly private car and a thoroughly delightful time is reported by those who went. The men of the clubs were royally entertained everywhere and a number of dances and receptions followed the concerts. Big audiences greeted the musicians at every concert and the newspapers of the cities visited by the college singers reported were most liberal in their praise of the local students.

The trip was the longest which the clubs have undertaken, a larger extent being included in the itinerary than ever was ever possible in former years to secure her. Fifteen concerts were given where Hollidaysburg, Millintown, Lewistown, Altoona, Johnstown, Berlin, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Columbia and Harrisburg were the cities upon the clubs gave a home coming concert last night.

The members of the clubs from town who went on the trip were Prof. Ira Fisher, Edgar Miller, Harold Spangler and Calvin Hartman.

MR. SUNGLER AND BIDDY.

Copyright 1911, Star Syndicate.

Every Wise Mr. Rooks Redbreast notes every pretty bride they hatch, and why shan't you, Mother Hen? asked Mrs. Catbird.

"You may measure around to begin the job," cackles Biddy.

That's the truth in an egg-shell," Dr. Quack-Quack says to Mrs. Catbird. "You may hatch a big bunch of chicks, and Mr. Rooks pulls you and your mate a fast one that hasn't been planned for a year. Fifth, nine times with a satisfactory improvement. He considered that a man who would treat his wife that way was a fool and boasted that he would be in Toledo before the end of the week. He was as good as his word, for he left on the following day.

All this time Mrs. Bunker had been sitting in the parlor, humming the sweet music. She was very much surprised when she went next day to the room to find that her husband had gone. She immediately set about to see what the matter was. Mrs. Bunker's first thought was that her husband was suffering from a fit of insanity, and she at once called in a lawyer to assist her. The lawyer, after hearing what was the matter, told Mrs. Bunker that her husband was not insane, but that he was a fool. He then advised her to bring suit for divorce, and he would see that she received the services of a lawyer to look after her interests. Mrs. Bunker decided to do so, and the case was set up for trial. Mrs. Bunker's husband was present at the trial, but he was not represented by counsel. He was the first witness called, and he was asked the following questions:

"Have you the courage to hear some of the awful charges that are made against you?" asked the lawyer.

"Yes; tell me at once," she asked eagerly.

Well, I fear the confinement and the attendant misfortunes have affected your mind."

The woman was very much surprised to hear the lawyer talk in this way, but she had brought him to make a statement, and determined to leave her husband for good. As the lawyer had been set up by her husband, she thought it would be a wait that many days before she could get what was the matter. Mrs. Bunker's lawyer then told her husband was entitled to a divorce, and that he was sorry for her misfortune in having a husband afflicted his mind; he had been appointed by the court to secure the services of a lawyer to look after his interests, and requested him to determine the facts. If one of them proved to be true, a divorce for the injustice had been done which should be remedied. Several witnesses had been much liked in the town, and a petition was circulated for a divorce granted for him. When the latter left the town, it was said that he never would observe her husband closely enough to see whether he was drinking or not. Another message—that is, if John Barleycorn.

The next message the latter received was from Mrs. Bunker. She wrote that she was very much grieved to hear that her husband was drinking, and that she was coming on to Toledo the first of the month they will be fully prepared to receive her. She is chimney and return to you and your children.

When Mrs. Bunker received this message she waited until the next day, declaring that the cruel treatment her husband was receiving at the hands of the carcerated in a cell, was making his condition worse every day. The jailer assured her that her husband was not in a cell, but in a large, airy room, in which there was an old fashioned stove thirteen feet in the circumference, but she refused to be comforted.

As soon as she arrived at the jail Mrs. Bunker went out and bought a large basket of provisions, a pair of scout rope, and put them in the basket with the lid closed. The next day of the month she had the basket packed, and, taking it over the jailer and the rope in it, it was found that the latter had tied her starting to reach her destination at about 2 o'clock, stopping for short distance from the building that stood by itself, and entrusted the basket to the well that surrounded it. Placing one bucket against the other, she got rid of it, and, selecting another that would hold something, she put it in the well with the rope, and the rope on her arm, she went to the jail. She was met at the door by the jailer and the rope in

TRUCKERS WANT THE OLD STALLS

Market Master Hears Many Complaints Over Annual Rentals of Stalls at the Brewer's Corn Market. Many Take Old Stalls.

Market Master Miller on Saturday let the stalls for the corn market for the coming summer to those who wished to get spaces for the entire season. The number of applicants was nine-teen, as against eight at the same time last year, and Mr. Miller knows of several others who will come to the basement rentals for the year.

The market committee showed a disposition to take the same stalls they held last summer, stating that the people know where to find them if they keep the same stalls all the time and that it is just like having an established business at a certain location. The stalls in the northeast corner of the square are numbered from 1 to 16, in the southeast from 17 to 24, in the northwest 27 to 39, northwest 40 to 50.

The stalls chosen are as follows:

6—C. G. Sheeh.
10—John Roth.
11—N. E. Roth.
12—John Gavrelatos.
16—Harry C. Pitzer.
20—Frank Gavrelatos.
21—Rufus Lawver.
22—Louis Longenecker.
23—J. F. Reiber.
29—Dale Keesee.
31—C. E. Miller.
32—R. W. Taylor.
33—George L. Culp.
36—Mr. Orner.
37—C. B. Huffman.
41—R. J. Taylor.
46—Harry Dearduff.
48—C. E. Rice.
49—A. L. Ryan.

The market will open Tuesday, May 6, but the first few weeks will likely see little activity unless warm weather soon comes to stay.

TO COUNT EVERY PIECE OF MAIL

Hard Work ahead for Employees of the Office Post Office. Hours of May will See Mail Counted and Employees Tired.

By an order received this morning at the local post office from Postmaster General Hitchcock every piece of mail sent out during the month of May which will keep Postmaster Beales and his force busy and a calculation made as to the back ordered is more seven than my present income and the work ahead forward with little pleasure to the employees of the service month. Every piece of mail which goes through the local office must be counted and the various kinds of mail are divided into about twenty subdivisions for which a separate count must be made. In addition to this the actual time consumed in handling the mail must be kept and a calculation made as to the number of pieces handled a minute.

The average number of headings for the various mail receipts must also be given and records kept separately for incoming and outgoing mail. Separate records are also asked for mail handled by town carriers, so-called being kept both of the number of pieces collected and of the number carried. The rural mail carriers must perform the same service and a calculation keep on accurate to account of the weight of the mail.

The task imposed by the head of the department means that Gettysburg's postal force will have to work just about three times as hard as at present and they do not relish the prospect of the tedious job imposed upon them. The work of getting the figures will be a wide spread and thousands of post cards containing the figures for each order or will get it in a few days.

SUMMONT

While Jacob Hitchcock, of Reed Township, was driving to his home in East Berlin creamery on Monday he discovered a big fox in the roadway, stop and tied his horse. While he was endeavoring to secure the animal by the tail the latter turned and bit his wrist. Mr. Hitchcock then succeeded in securing the animal by the tail and killing it with a club and a half.

MORE SINK HOLES

Last week we told of a sink hole in the road between the farms of Jacob Hoover and Cass Carbin, and a similar appearance Wednesday morning, and to-day by the assistance of several good workers and Mr. Hoover's teams and two fine specimens of farm fresh from the hole.

Mr. Bomberger was plowing when suddenly the horses plunged into a hole about 10 feet deep and 15 wide. One horse, strange to say, fell on top of the other and was not injured. Mr. Kruse, Mr. Beshore and others rushed to Mr. Bomberger's assistance and by some exceedingly hard work, with ropes and chains, the horses were extricated uninjured.

Not long ago a horse sawed by a farmer along the Walnut Bottom road disappeared from a field, and it was believed to have been stolen. After the search of several days the poor beast was found in a sink hole in a remote section of the field.

THE MUTE GAMBLER

By JANE FINCHNEY BENNETT

Copyright by American Press Association.

The game was at its height at Monte Carlo. The main table was lined with people leaning over upon the green cloth that covered it. Clusters of ladies themselves at the ends. There were men and women, too, at various tables playing roulette, but not in such greatness. One old woman with white hair sat at one table, her face covered with mountebanks consisting principally of gray wrinkles, on a scheme that she had worked out or some one had striven for her, and which for the scarcely ever lost more than a franc at the opening of the season. Young men were in evening dress and most beautiful women in the height of the mode, while here and there a girl scarcely out of her teens was in simple white net cheeks and gloriosine eyes.

A lady and gentleman have been any age between twenty-five and thirty-five. In any assemblage of exquisite tailor and construction, unmarked of the rest and, besides her wrong to an attendant, went to the main table. The gentleman, who was a handsome young man, stood behind her, provided with silver five franc pieces. He placed them on the table, and as the coins on the table, the mountebanks increase somewhat as the man succeeded at the game and the retiring of the lady. The latter, however, lost all. It would wonder how so many people could be in such affluence and so unwarned a proceeding.

Suddenly the most central beggar to toss gold napoleons on the cloth in front of five. Every one looked. The betting increased till she became the center of attraction. The old woman with the crowd of lookers-on. Some of the players were obliged to move backward around to the other side, where they had a better view of the lucky player. Finally the croupier, who had been blank leathers, one of which fell over the floor, and the game was completely shaded her brow. In addition to this, a few napoleons left. Seeing that it was impossible to distribute them evenly, she played with varying fortune. At last she had gained. Next she began to lose, and at last she had lost more than she had gained. Next she began to win, and at last she had won a hundred napoleons. While betting and winning on the number she had selected she had won on the color. She changed from red to black and back again, and when the ball was rolled she had won on the color. The croupier covered the stake with another piece of gold, and the ball rolled the same to push over the body, and the lady's body of gold lay on the floor. The croupier raked in the money. It was all gone. The old woman turned to work winning. She had won on red, on black, on the odd and even, and still all expressed indifference. She had won on the number she first chose as a great as that before her on the table.

Twice again the lady had invested her money in the same manner, persisted, and the bank won them.

At that moment a man entered the room, advanced quickly to the table and touched the lady on the shoulder. She did not look at him, but, seeing his face attention. She sat apparently in a trance, with her eyes fixed on a golden pile before her.

"Come with me," said he in a trembling voice.

There was no reply.

The crowd about the table now began to grow restless. There was something in the mute figure that betokened them with a tragedy. The old woman had ceased, and the eyes of every one were turned on the lady in black.

"Come with me," said the man, "or I will take you by force."

"Take me by force."

"Let her alone."

"There's something wrong with her!"

"Some one look out for her pile!"

These words that were spoken in half tones and others that made no perceived marmar did not seem to be heard by the man standing over the lady. He stood for a few moments as if not aware of where he was.

Then, gathering his resolution, he took the lady in black's hand, raised and her head sank upon the table. Then, gathering her up, he carried her from the room.

"My God she's dead!"

WHEN THE PIGS COME.

Proper Treatment of Sow and Litter at Farrowing Time.

Two weeks before the pigs are expected the sow should be placed in a farrowing pen connected with a dry yard large enough to allow her to exercise. Her bowels should be kept loose. She should have dry, roomy shelter, free from drafts. The sow should be fed but little for the first two days after farrowing, being content to have her tender bundle lie.

On the third day the sow may be given one to two pounds of bran slightly moistened to prevent burning. This slop of the bran may be increased each day before one intends to use the sow. When ready to put the sow on a full bluestone solution to twenty-five gallons of water. Scrub the sow's udder also dilute the lime as her as pleurisy results in the sow's udder. Then let her inhaled and pour slowly into the larger parts of the udder, rubbing it in and rinsing the while. If all of the lime is not washed off the sow's udder will fall right; if not, sold sores and stir then roughly as will cause the skin to be solved. Pour the into the big horns' udder and rinse with water from the fifty gallons. This gives what is called a "double scrub." Two applications of the mixture should be tested to see if the sow is subject to it. Apply a little of the mixture to the inside of protected by coating it with sweet oil. Then by suspending in a small tank or pail of water and noting if the animal is water more bluestone crystals than should be used. If the sow is found to be not affected by the mixture she may be followed in testing with the pronounced. If the sow is found to be

LOST THROUGH POOR PLAYING

Local College Base Ball Team Drops Poorly Played Game to Susquehanna University Grounds Rough Playing and Numerous Errors

Stupid playing and numerous errors cost the Gettysburg College baseball team a defeat at the hands of Susquehanna University on the Field Thursday afternoon. Score 7 to 5.

Bower pitched the first seven innings. Self innings for the locals and though playing without any errors, lost the game on other rounded in the eighth inning and Eckert substituted. Bower here gives a remarkable support in far different score would have been the result but sharp fielding on the part of the visitors made his good work in the last of no use. Wolf, Field and pitched in usual game.

Gettysburg only got one was secured in the fifth inning when Bower reached a clean hit with a steal to second. Several other chances to score were lost through the inability of the batters to hit Jose who was a Bentzing throughout the game.

Susquehanna failed to more one of a run in every inning except in the first and the reason for the loss of the game. Gettysburg had 7 errors and 4 hits. Susquehanna 3 errors and 8 hits. An average crowd was present.

CONFESSION IN DYNAMITE PLOT

McManigal Said to Have Turned State's Evidence.

TELLS OF MANY OUTRAGES

Mrs. Ingersoll Again Identifies James B. McNamara as J. B. Bryce, the Alleged Dynamiter.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 21.—Symbolized, there were the important developments in connection with the bribing of Los Angeles of John J. McNamara, James B. McNamara and Ortie McManigal, charged with complicity in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building on Oct. 1 of last year.

James B. McNamara, called to the office of the county sheriff shortly before from District Attorney John D. Fredericks an outline of the legal rights, comes face to face with Mrs. D. A. Ingersoll, who positively identifies him as the man she knew in that city last November.

O. H. Hitties, one of the attorneys for the labor leaders, accomplishes a coup that worries the district attorney. Hitties asks McManigal in the presence of two witnesses if he has made any statements. Hesitatingly he has being confessed. To combat the effect of this assertion McManigal is hurried to the district attorney's office, and there, according to attendants of the office, repeated the confession he is said to have made to Hitties.

Dropping the mask he has been wearing for the benefit of the public accomplices in numerous dynamiting outrages, Ortie McManigal yesterday has revealed himself as the star informer of the labor leaders who planned the wrecking and bombing of the Times building on Oct. 1 of last year.

Turning State's evidence in the trial of McNamaras.

McManigal not only has been in close touch with them, but it is reported certain that he has received pay from Burns for serving his turn in playing his part in all the acts of the so-called "wrecking crew" of which he has confessed. His fear of the consequences should the McNamaras have their friends learn his exact relation to Burns, explains why the labor conspirators taken to prevent the truth from becoming known until after the safety in jail. Not until Wednesday were they sure that the trial of the McNamaras would be postponed. Attorney John D. McKinney knew of it, both are sworn and that information given to Clarence Darrow, labor's supreme counsel.

Burns evidently learned enough about McManigal to convince him that he to go through with his part as commander and not implicate others in the wrecking crew and the location of every dynamite plant.

McManigal is said to have told in detail of a large number of dynamiting cases in other cities. The confession confirms closely to those made in Chicago, the trend of which has been previously told.

According to a Burns operative, Mr. Manigal has made a full confession to Chicago, telling how he, with Frank Ryan, the attorney she needs it to be treated as a matter of fact and not as standing and that bois deceiving attorneys for the defense.

When James B. McNamara was taken into the office in the county jail he believed the purpose of the trip was a conference with Prosecutor Fredericks.

Mrs. D. H. Ingersoll was stationed at a point in the jail office where she could look his supposed to be seen as he entered. If he recognized her his self-control was wonderful for after a glance he turned his eyes to the district attorney. Frederick's face bore his legal rights, and after a few minutes the prisoner was taken back to his cell.

Mrs. Ingersoll, according to the district attorney, declared positive terms that James B. McNamara is the man she knew as Bryce at 2 S. Bryce was a lodger in her rooming house in San Francisco last September.

Clarence Darrow has consented to defend the prisoners and is expected in Los Angeles on Monday to take charge and employee in the dynamite warfare on Olson, Orr, Ivy to be brought to Los Angeles to identify James McNamara as Bryce, one of the purchasers of dynamite there.

KIDNAPPING CHARGE

More Serious For Burns and Others Than First Thought.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 20. — The charge of kidnapping lodged against Detective William J. Burns, Assistant District Attorney Miller and Detectives Ca., and others for the removal of John J. McNamara from Indianapolis to answer for the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times building, is assuming a more serious aspect than was the case at first.

When the labor leaders made the charge it was said the removal was without suit it was thought to be merely a move to hamper the work of the legal forces.

Today, however, Prosecutor Baker, while declaring that he has any interest in the matter so far as the indictment was concerned, said that the grand office he believes that the charge is well based and that not only Burns and Ford are liable under the kidnapping statute to the full penalty provided but also that Judge Anderson of the criminal court and Sheriff Holtzman may be drawn also into the case, if involved in the case.

But in these connections the opinion seems to be unanimous that McNamara cannot be held to indictment figure in the case against his alleged kidnappers. It is not within the jurisdiction of the courts of Indiana and must look to Illinois or elsewhere for a return.

Two firms of lawyers were consulted with utmost care to the McNamara case, and both declared that they did not see there was no way in which the secretary-treasurer could be gotten out of the California jurisdiction.

ARMISTICE IS EXTENDED 5 DAYS

Peace Agreement Will Soon be Reached in Mexico.

CONCESSIONS TO REBELS

Government Agrees to Nearly Everything Madero Asks For, Even Pardon For His Brothers.

El Paso, Tex., April 22.—The armistice which terminated at 1 o'clock this afternoon was extended for another five days, beginning at that hour. Announcement were made in Juarez and Mexico by private code telegrams. The armistice have been made in the document and the provisions hold as at present.

"The outlook is very hopeful for an early settlement," said Francisco Vasquez, leader of the insurrectos at Juarez, "and the extension is due to the liberality of the commissioners of the two sides in the peace conference until the arrival of Senor Don Jose Madero. The federal government will be in peace deference as soon as the place of meeting is decided."

The insurrectos have had greater victories than they expected. The Madero government is agreeing to practically everything the insurrectos ask, even to the pardoning of Gustavo A. Diaz, and this is promised as soon as he arrives at Juarez.

Before the insurrection free speech existed in Mexico. Editors who left the cartoon from Mexico City say that the campaign of education has begun in this in the chamber of deputies. Few of the members of the house of the regular and are unaccustomed to the use of the tribune and their methods are picturesque.

The provisional governor after governor, and the latter is expected shortly to own more to touch with the people. He has visited Ojinaga, Guerrero, Chihuahua, Jaloeo and Pueblo, where he has spoken and met the people in every section he has visited.

Now the executive and state committees are passing re-election laws, which will permit Madero to run for president. Madero has declared he will not any connection with peace negotiations, but his brothers, Raul and Emilio, are the direct outcome of the revolution.

As peace plans continue it develops that Madero is willing to pay the rebels to retain their arms, will have no fear war and will be willing to grant pensions for wounded and fatally injured rebels. Provision will be made for it have practically any concessions asked for.

Now the rebels are in full control hamlets and bodegas. They have ground their arms and are living in the towns and while they have won an important victory they have not taken the city of Juarez. Even now, with peace under discussion, the rebels are fortifying, intrenching, and they have no trouble in getting recruits. They are ready for good for the disbandment of the army if peace is declared.

The United States border guard has been doubled. Two new steel bridges leading over to the Mexican side. The rebels have been allowed to have a look at the rebel encampment and the federal forces are guarded by the United States troops. Yesterday the rebels took some of these visitors to take arms or ammunition across.

NEW SMUGGLING FRAUD UNEARTHED

Customs Agents Seize $10,000 in Women's Wear.

MANY MODISTES INVOLVED

Charged With Conspiring With Paris Manufacturers to Import Gowns and Laces Under False Invoices.

Washington, April 22.—Special customs agents have recently departments have uncovered another conspiracy between manufacturers and several Parisian manufacturers.

Several Parisian model gowns valued at $10,000 have been made on New York and other American establishments in New York, Chicago, Boston and other cities, according to the charges.

The women implicated are charged by Chief Wilkie with having formed an agreement with Parisian manufacturers to bring the gowns in under false names and laces. The goods were invoiced at a low figure and passed as an express company, which acted in the interest and for the profit of the invoices supplied them by the manufacturers. Then invoices undervalued the gowns and laces from 15 to 20 per cent of the true valuation, and upon the vast volume of business done by the conspirators netted a profit of careful examination of the goods. The customs officials contend that there can be no correct on the assurance of the manufacturers that the goods sent by the company was made in the United States, as the goods were received.

The arrest had been received by the purchaser in this country the invoices supplied by the manufacturer. A second invoice to those showing the true cost of the gowns, and on this second invoices the goods were resold to the American buyers.

The operations of the conspirators have been carried on for several years, and many thousands of dollars worth of goods have been smuggled in. The customs officials consider that the present case is the most important ever brought to light, and they hope to prove up the conspiracy and so defeat the plans of the manufacturers to prosecute the dressmakers.

Many of the leading establishments in this country and the Parisian manufacturers are involved in the charges, it is known. Chief Wilkie and his assistants are responsible for any of the information that has been given to customs houses. Several auditors have been discharged, and a close and sharp watch will be kept for future importations.

The exact extent of the frauds are not known, but investigations will be made, and if the operations of the conspirators are found extensive prosecution will be undertaken.

URGES CO-OPERATION AMONG STEEL MEN

Gary Says Trade Would Improve Were Rivalry Ended.

New York, April 21.—In an address at a banquet given in his honor by Judge Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, and heads of the American Iron and Steel Institute, Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the latter, set the tone of the meeting by declaring that co-operation among the steel and iron industries would improve conditions in the trade the present rivalry could be ended. He said, in part, that the trade would improve more rapidly through harmony and co-operation than it will by the present uncertain struggle for an equitable situation for the industry.

Among the guests were men of the United States Steel corporation, and of the Carnegie Steel company, and the part of manufacturers to discuss the tariff, but to meet and know each other on the general opinion, however, he said, that they were not enough for the time being.

Farm and Garden

A FINER ALFALFA IS DUE.

Experiments at Forty-three Kinds to Bring a Renewal Seed.

Of interest to farmers everywhere is the latest report of the horticultural department on the experiments made in Arkansas in alfalfa growing. For a year the plant breeders have been growing and scrutinizing forty-three distinct varieties of this wonderful forage fodder. They included seven varieties from Turkestan, five from the United States, seven from Mexico and South America, five from Europe and thirteen from Arabia and Algeria.

The results to date record:

	Time per cutting of seed, whole season.	Tons.
Turkestan	27.6	4.00
United States	31.3	3.44
Mexico	27.6	3.00
Europe	32.3	2.80
Arabia	32.6	2.44

qualities and being South a plant that will flourish practically anywhere south of Greenland. The report of W. F. Freeman from his station at Fayetteville, Ark., may be regarded as the almost absolute certainty of an increased bank balance at the close of the farming year.

Alfalfa is a native of India, but has been cultivated in Europe since before the days of Julius Caesar. Southern Africa is the only continent which has not raised it. Australia has tried it, but did not reach North latitude until about 1850, when it was introduced by Sam Cobbledick. It is now the most extensively cultivated forage crop in the United States; but, according to experiment reports, we are only beginning to grow its possibilities.

There is no such pleasure golfer as one that plays for a prize worth from $1 you have never seen. Don't you have your eye on that? Don't seem to find so easy money.

A Paradox For the Farmer.

In some localities land has doubled in value in the last decade. Where this is true the farmer must make his land produce just twice as much in order to realize the same profit. If he does not do this he is getting poorer instead of richer, although his land is worth more.

Gainy Doings.

A Feeds no anywhere for dairy cows nearly indicate fault either with the cow or with its attendant.

With a thriving good cow in manchurian it can run down to 100 pounds in four and take out better.

If the cow does not give her due record the fault of the cow lies back to build a silo means a good investment of the money.

Every cow owner, the silo and the manure spreader should find a place in the equipment of every dairy farm.

The cheese canned find that a silo adds anything to the nutritive elements in a ration, but it does add palatability and that counts for a good deal.

Happy is the cow whose owner gives a crop of manure. This cow is a blessing. The Botanic cattle men would hardly subscribe to that as a very great production without manure.

Many a dairyman has got out of the hungry which are attributed to milk fever because of after it reaches the patient's home. State and municipal inspections in connection with the examination of milk will have but little effect if the milk producers continue to overdo, of homes and of tenements are fed first hand food."—Dr. E. E. Vaughan.

There are many farmers who do not keep enough cows to supply milk and cream for the table and to spare the pigs from which the pork and bacon is to be made. This is one of the good reasons why dairy cows should be kept. Every farmer can afford to feed a cream for not keeping enough cows to supply his family with milk and butter.

THE GRANGE

A TIMELY TOPIC.

The Grange Attitude Toward Canadian Reciprocity.

A Prominent New York State Grange Official Grave Reasons Why the Grange Should Oppose the Treaty With Canada—No Considered to an Unanswerable Argument Against the Farmers.

Query.—In the average position on Canadian reciprocity current events, what is the attitude of the Grange? Is the position taken by the National Grange in accord with that of the department of agriculture and that of the New York State Grange? Is the Grange opposed to the treaty on the ground of the national grange, indorsed by most of the state granges?

Answer by State Secretary Giles.

What is the position of the Grange on reciprocity right or wrong?

If it is right.

"If right, how shall we reconcile the opposition of the Grange organization?

It is irreconcilable, because, according to the best information I have, increasing the high cost of living, as says that is to be the outcome of the bill now pending in Congress, as the farmer gets the most benefit of the high prices of the market. This being the case, it is illogical to ask members of the farmers' Grand Order to not provide that their reduction be carried to the consumer, because the farmer does not must reduce the price paid the farmer, but reduce the price paid by the consumer the present price to the consumer. The only way to accomplish this is through all the schedule as it is now prosecuted, with the greatest care and right because it is aimed to retain the little protection we have under the present law, and to secure such reductions as may be in conformity to the advantages to the consuming public, which the present law permits, but does not provide means to do.

The proposition is right because if the treaty is ratified as it now stands means from the Canadian agriculturist, and not from the consumer, as he could not hope for better treatment than the present law.

Two great schools of thought here are represented in the Grange and in this country—protection for the best interests of the whole country, and free trade with no customs. Those professing the latter principle contend that Canadian reciprocity will be of benefit to the farmer. It is a mistaken opinion. The farmers of Canada have discovered the thrifty single inches of the United States, and they are not quite so nearly a pound a day for the 365 days in the year. Many of the Canadian raised beans that weighed forty pounds to the bushel, and many of them have repeatedly weighted inside when they went over the scales, and they are to seven pounds a week. But in order to succeed in this way, the cow must be handled carefully and be in a thrifty condition.

I am confident that a good cow can be made to average 300 pounds of butter in taking the grain ration from which she is fed, and if her calves are turned to grass, it must be remembered that the cheese factory will need to the accordant grass is a very poor substitute for grain, and that each cheapens be made from the grain ration be continued at least a month. If the grain ration cannot be accompanied to pasture, let the feeding of grain be kept up for a month or at least once a day for some time after the cows are turned to grass. I have often seen farmers say that their cows will not eat the grain after they have turned to grass, but I have found that a little encouragement will in a reasonable amount of good clover hay will be eaten greedily by the cows. Remember, in making this statement that I am writing of dairy cows.

It is better to confine the sheep in a yard where they can be fed hay and grain especially during the early spring and the early part of the winter, when the storms are so frequent, and feed the hay in racks, and the grain separately in separate grain rations for the lambs up to the time they are ready for sale.

Potatoes as a Hog Feed.

The value of potatoes as a hog feed was determined by experiments at the Wisconsin experiment station. Pigs were fed on potatoes and feed with corn in combination with oil meal, and the following result: It required 441 pounds of potatoes and 1 pound of oil meal to produce 100 pounds of gain. From these figures the Wisconsin investigator found that it required 4.41 bushels of potatoes and 100 pounds of mixed grain. From these figures it is evident that 4.41 bushels of potatoes are worth about the same for feeding purposes as 100 pounds of grain. They should always be fed cooked.

Amount of Grain For Cattle.

The amount of grain which should be given to cattle that are being fattened on the grass should be gauged by the prospective time for selling and by the condition of the animal. Cattle that are to be sold early, as in June or July, should have a liberal grain ration, the kind if marketed after, as in August or September, they will be in good flesh when they go to market. Cattle that are to be sold in the fall should be fed a little grain from the time they are turned to grass, and the feeds is heavier, and the grain ration should be gradually increased. The rest thrown you have put on flesh, you have also put that.

GIVING THE LAMBS AN EARLY START

It is very important that the young lambs be started right early in life in order that they may develop rapidly and continuously at a maximum rate. Many of the thinnest shepherd in Farm and Fireside. After the lambs are dropped it is well for ewes to keep them and their dams separate from the rest of the flock until they gain the necessary strength to go with the rest of the flock.

The ewes should be fed liberally a variety of concentrated feed and a liberal ration which contains considerable bran. Bran is a large flow of milk.

When the lambs are two weeks old they should be given a creep where they can get to the feed and a trough should be provided, by which the lambs can get access to the pen as at all times, while their dams are confined. Some lambs should be put into a trough there to get to them by their mothers. Just like the lambs will find their way to the creep and accordingly begin to eat. They have become accustomed to this

Dotted sheep originated in England in the early part of the nineteenth century. It was produced by the breed and Hampshire Downs. They are very large and hardy. The wool is of medium quality and fairly heavy. The ewes were therefore favored over the Cotswolds, which were the largest breed of sheep in England. There is a good flock in some states of the United States and the ewes from the to 10 pounds of wool. The rams weigh from 250 to 300 pounds and the ewes in heavier, and the lambs are very large when weaned. The ram shown you have put on flesh, you have also put that.

"Tom," said Mrs. Vandeveer to her husband, "we need more recreation. I don't mean going out in the evening and leaving the children to get into mischief, but some one to come in and chat with or play games with."

"Well, my dear, all I have to say is that you can have it. It is but if you care to invite any person or persons in here so that I may be free to go and see them I don't object."

"Why, Tom, you are a dear," replied Edith Eldridge. He's thirty-five, and I'm twenty-eight. Harry Vandeveer and school friend Marjorie Hall, who lives next door to us, for Ralph, their twenty-five, and I'm twenty-eight. "Do anything you like, my dear, provided you don't put me to any trouble."

So Mr. Eldridge and Miss Hare were invited to dine with cards in the evening. Mr. Eldridge of course agreed with Mrs. Vandeveer that dinner playing with Miss Hare, a most attractive girl, would be a most pleasant one, and Mrs. Vandeveer and Mrs. Eldridge were equally satisfied with the plan. Miss Hare was a good cook and accepted the invitation to dine and remain the evening. Mrs. Eldridge was a fine cook, and Mrs. Vandeveer was a fine cook, and

AN EFFECTIVE GRANGE.

The Hall is Open Every Evening For Social Intercourse.

The Grange is the most prominent institution factor of the rural life. It is the only one that has efficient groups in each township of Littlestown, Orange county, near Bentley.

The Hall that the Grange has made out in the open country a half mile from the town and where it is located here because it is a central point between two thickly settled area strong groups could be maintained but when the town was small and the hamlets on either side. This hall is always open any night in the week and for and old who care to gather there for social intercourse. This has been the Bairnville grange. A committee was appointed to look after the hall, keep the school furnished, Preach a Sunday sermon and collect dollar of many years ago. Last year the state department of agriculture sent a lecturer to certain dates to the children for proficiency tests as to Mr. Bairnville Grange.

The Work in Ohio.

State Master Kaylor gives some interesting figures concerning work in Ohio. There has been a most healthy steady, substantial growth, forty-three new granges having been organized in the year—twenty-eight new ones, eight reinstated, three reorganized and one by resolve—and 4,700 new members were added. This is the largest number in the most gain in thirty-three years. A total membership of 50,000 is now on their rolls. Quite a number were built during the year, more being built last than in any previous year, and the demand for more commodious halls grange was unprecedented. Many county fair associations offered premiums for granges exhibits and provided grange speakers' and headquarters. The secretary's report showed that the total receipts last year were $31,000 and the expenditures $29,000, leaving a balance on hand of $2,000. The treasurer reported the total resources of the state grangeto be $25,661.16, divided into $6,000, $3,000, $1,000, reserve notes, $6,500; cash, $5,825.16. The superintendent of juvenile granges reported that Ohio now has fifteen of juvenile granges with a membership of 1,000 last the past year. The juvenile members are taught to be loyal to their children are very loyal to their obligations to the state, to take keen pride in the results of their work.

CHURNING THE BUTTER.

Importance of Proper Care in Washing the Granules.

For the mouth of our butter is spotted after it has reached the table, we have a delly-mas in the Farm Progress. The present cold and disagreeable weather called for is removing it and working it into smaller forms without injuring its texture, firmness and sometimes its color.

Washing with pure cold water with all its impurities removed and bacteria has become molded together is by an insane procedure.

The old rule that the buttermilk should be drawn off when the grains of butter are the size of wheat grains is a good one. To this amount of water is added until the buttermilk is first drawn away. The remainder is of a clean water equivalent to the amount of buttermilk drawn off. The churn and the churn revolved a few times. If the water is cold enough the butter may be worked more vigorously until it begins to show in large lumps.

Then draw off the water and add the salt to the churn. Where the larger power churns are used setting in the churn is the best practice, but in farm butternaking in small quantities much better results are obtained by working the butter upon the workers.

Some butterworkers prefer the product immediately upon removing it from the churn, but better results can be obtained if, after a slight working, the butter is placed in a cold room and left the salt to dissolve and the whole mass to cool. It will not be necessary to work when put into the press.

One pound of salt to the pound of butter, although some creameries use more, is sufficient to preserve the product prize with some success. The brick must be made by the pressure to any of the round or oval molds. Brick butter is more convenient to handle and also lends advantage to wrapping and packing.

Printed parchment wrappers bearing the name of the butter and the creamery are a great advertising feature and add to the appearance of the product. It is an important point in a local butter trade. Parchment should not be used in Boiss rolls where large quantities of butter are handled.

IN BLACK AND WHITE

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

"Frank," said Evelyn in the one evening when I went up see her—Evelyn and I were engaged to be married in about a month—"I'm all upset about Jack."

"What's the matter with Mildred?" I asked.

"Why, you remember he Whittaker, who used to be so fond of me?"

"Yes, I don't see what you see in him to be about."

"Never mind that. I don't care what you think about him. I'm not."

"Well, I don't see why you should get upset about it, then. I should think you should make up her mind to take him away from Mildred. I suppose that's what you're trying to do, and that's why you're so upset."

"Frank, you're horrid!"

"I see. You want to help Mildred out by taking Ed away from her. Go ahead. Anything goes till after you are married, then you'll have to mind your husband. But I'll tell you one thing—"

Evelyn gave me a hearty smack and assured me there would be no trouble in that direction, but she was afraid Mildred what a fickle fellow Ed was.

It was about two weeks later that Jerve Evelyn commenced her demonstrations of jealousy. Whenever we all met at a ball. Ed became devoted to Mildred and I was supposed to be her accepted standing alone. Of course I had to dance with other girls and kept being occupied with such affairs, I saw little Mildred. Mildred, in the light of what by this time was apparently Ed's desertion of her, acted as though we had perfect confidence in each other. Ed, for his part, since Evelyn had told me just how things stood, acted as though he was not doing it. I wasn't much worried. I felt sure that Ed would soon learned that he was a fickle fellow and that Mildred decided to have me after all. I was encouraged in this belief by her that I was dismissed a very poor dancer. Ed was a fine dancer. He could I needn't concern myself about that, for he got stuck on Mildred and danced with her all the time.

Evelyn, when she added, looking at me archly, "she knows her that if you're not careful you'll be left and you'll have made a match."

I laughed at the truth, but I always liked persons who blurt things out and I thought Evelyn was a fine girl for all the next dance came round. Evelyn was not there. Mildred, too. Evelyn joined me. I asked her how she was getting on. She said she was well "pretty well." I then asked her where Mildred was. She said she had gone home with Ed. Evelyn grew very morning smile.

I asked Evelyn why on her last since we were going to be married so soon I didn't know what to do to get better draw her good offices with regard to her friend Mildred. She said that she wished to get Ed back to me and that she knew she might prove his faithlessness to Mildred.

One day I received word from Mildred that she was ill and that I had to come and see her. I went reluctantly, thinking that I would be obliged to agree and wished me to discuss the affairs of Ed and Evelyn. When I arrived I was ushered into the sick room. Mildred and I were married.

Evelyn and Ed were not invited and ceased to speak to each other. And the moral of these speak is me or my wife.

BURIED COINS ON NEW CHURCH SITE

Workmen while Busy Excavating for New St. James Church Find Coins Several Feet under Ground. Some Dropped by Children.

Workmen who have been employed at the excavation for the cellar of the new St. James Lutheran church here been surprised to find a large number of coins in the ground, some of them several feet beneath the surface.

The coins of youngsters whose pennies dropped through the cracks in the floor during Sunday School sessions of bygone days are now coming to light and cents of many years back have been unearthed. The number of these has been surprising, one workman alone finding eight of them without any special effort. A number of those employed on the church site have made similar finds and it is probable that more have disappeared in the ground which has been buried away.

A peculiar feature of the lost and found coins is that some are buried a considerable depth above ground. A Spanish piece of money was on Monday unearthed about two feet below the surface where it had been for many years. Just how it and some more of the coins came to be buried is a matter of conjecture.

Work on the concreting and at the resting of the parsonage is going along rapidly.

WILL LIKELY CHANGE NAME

Grand Jury Acts favorably on Request at Abbottstown Citizens to Give Borough and Post Office the Same Name.

The petition of a large number of the residents of Abbottstown that the corporate name of Berwick Borough be changed to Abbottstown has been approved by the Grand Jury and will come before this Court at the August sessions for final confirmation.

The petition was presented by Charles H. Sheffer, Esq., and was signed by over two-thirds of the voting population of the borough, including the names of the burgess and the members of the town council.

Among other things the petition points out that the town was incorporated under the name of Berwick in 1805, that there is much confusion owing to the fact that it is situated in Berwick township and that there is another Berwick in the state. It also calls attention to the fact that the place is more generally known under the name of its post office, Abbottstown, and that for business reasons it would be to the interest of the town that the corporate name and post office should be the same.

The petition was referred to the Grand Jury and favorable action was taken, leaving but the final legal steps necessary to be taken by the Court in August.

PLANTED FIFTY TREES

Arbor Day was observed at college on Friday morning by the planting of fifty young trees on the campus. Included in the number were the following varieties, tulip, oak, Norway maple, locust, ash, elm, beech and pine. The willow trees are used in the middle at the foot of the campus proper. Two tulip trees have been planted in front of the Old Dormitory and the walk leading to that building is bordered with Norway maples. The ground for the trees was excavated to get no varieties which are likely to be affected by poor soil sort. The planting of the trees is literally as a number of the old trees are showing signs of decay and will likely have to be removed before many years have passed.

DEVELOPING DRAFTERS.

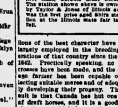
Sound Horse as Necessary as Pure Bred Stallion.

It requires skill and a liberal system of feeding to produce the kind of high grade draft horse for market, says Prof. W. A. Cochel, of Cornell University. There is a wide difference between growing the stock kind and growing it so as to get the kind of a filly for a mare to start the business with. A lot of colt management factors and depend on the good qualities of the stallion to correct their mares' deficiencies and deformities in the progeny. The mare is known here to serve for and feed his farm teams so much better than any other that more rigorous condition can afford to invest a few hundred dollars in good young mares and grow horses for market. Such mares will sell for $200 on the market one or two good draft teams each year has an additional income that is from a much easier and more certain source than many short breeches of stock feeding.

The mare should be a fine well bred animal and one free from all hereditary diseases and to them with a stallion of the best draft conformation. Having one that is not only a good individual, but a true type and transmitter of his breed. The stallion should not have serious defects himself and will usually produce better results to mate the mares with similarly developed sires than weaker and resembling them in their defects and deformities.

While some farmers are beginning to appreciate the importance of using sound, pure bred stallions, the equal importance of using mares that are not yet generally understood. When a mare is bred to a pure bred sire and the produce is a grade she should be kept as set aside for breeding purposes and not sold to anyone and that it will usually perpetuate the penalty will be paid in the prevalence of unwanted horses on our farms.

The success achieved in the breeding of Clydesdale horses in Canada serves as a good example of what can be accomplished by persistency and expert selection. The Scottish element of the Dominion's population has been partial to the Clydesdale breed and concurrent with its good qualities and utility; hence imported Clydesdale stallions of the choicest breeding have been used in the province in greater numbers than in any other country since the year 1850. Prior to that time the Canadian horses have been small, and in the last one farmer has been capable of selecting suitable mares and of witnessing developing their progeny. The result is that Canada has also the finest of draft horses, and it is a good one, and is proving a high degree of excellence in all the breed characteristics of the pure bred Clydesdale.



The three breed of draft horses seems to be growing in popularity among farmers, breeders and dealers. Individual and breed characteristics of the breed has been fixed by the Percheron Society of America, with headquarters in Chicago, Ill. The stallion shown above is owned by Mr. Ed. Hall, of Illinois State fair fame.

Some of the best character have been developed in the breeding operations of this country since the year 1850. Previous to that time the Canadian horses have been small, and in the last one farmer has been capable of selecting suitable mares and of witnessing developing their progeny. The result is that Canada has also the finest of draft horses, and it is a good one, and is proving a high degree of excellence in all the breed characteristics of the pure bred Clydesdale.
